

AMENDMENTS TO THE CLAIMS

1. (Currently amended) An electric power bar, comprising:
 - a body;
 - an electrical cord adapted to plug the body into an electrical outlet of a building;
 - the body having at least one female receptacle which receives power via the electrical cord, the female receptacle being adapted to receive a plug from one of a computer or ancillary equipment whereby power is supplied to the computer or the ancillary equipment;
 - the body having a communications module which includes a built-in modem, whereby the communications module serves as a conduit for sending and receiving messages;
 - the body having at least one of an Ethernet receptacle, an universal serial bus receptacle, or a telephone jack receptacle in communication with the communications module, whereby a computer is connected to the communications module.
2. (Original) The electric power bar as defined in Claim 1, wherein the communications module has a phone line in receptacle and a phone line out receptacle.
3. (Original) The electric power bar as defined in Claim 1, wherein the body has an Ethernet receptacle, an universal serial bus receptacle, and a telephone jack receptacle all in communication with the communications module, whereby a computer can be connected in one of several different ways to the communications module.
4. (Currently amended) The electric power bar as defined in Claim 1, wherein the ~~communications module comprises a~~ modem is replaceable ~~modem~~.

LAW OFFICES OF
CHRISTENSEN O'CONNOR JOHNSON KINDNESS^{PC}
1420 Fifth Avenue
Suite 2800
Seattle, Washington 98101
206.682.8100